Henry Hausner, 58, 302 Sumner street, and Mrs. Hausner were slightly injured in a thrilling runaway Sunday evening, which climaxed with a smash-up against the iron railing around the city hall. Mr. Hausner suffered a wrenched ankle. His wife was badly bruised. The wagon in which they were riding was wrecked, and a section of the city hall fence broken.

Mr. and Mrs. Hausner were returning from a day spent in the country, driving a horse and wagon owned by the La Crosse Baking company, the man's employers. Coming west on State street, the bolt holding the thills to the front axle of the wagon suddenly dropped out. The shafts fell against the horse's legs and he was off at a gallop.

With the elderly couple sawing wildly at the bit in an effort to check his rush, the horse dashed down State street. At Sixth street he swerved into the iron fence along the curb of the city hall. The buggy smashed, its occupants were hurled out, and the traces parted, liberating the frightened animal.

The horse was caught a few minutes later, when his run ended with a head-on collision with an automobile at Fifth and State streets. Police ran out from central station and caught him. The car he struck was owned by T. J. Thompson, Osseo, Wis. One fender was bent in the collision.

In the meantime Dr. A. J. Rowles had come to the aid of the runaway's victims. He dressed their injuries, and they were taken to their home by the police.

ONALASKA AUTOS
TO INVADE CITY

If you see a string of autos chasing each other down the street this evening, don't be alarmed. It will be nothing more terrible than Onalaska coming down here to let La Crosse know they have a chauntauqua. The chauntauqua opens on Wednesday and will last for four days. Onalaska declares it to be a worthwhile event, with a number of interesting and important speakers and musicians on the program.

SWAP SHOTS WITH BAND OF MEXICANS

NACO, Ariz., Aug. 21.—More than 100 shots were exchanged across the international line about a mile west of here Saturday night between patrols belonging to the colored troops from the District of Columbia and a party on the Mexican side.

The militiamen say they halted some Mexicans who attempted to cross the line. In answer to the challenge the Mexicans fired.

In the fusillade that followed the only casualty was the wounding of one of the Mexicans.

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 21.—Thousands of families are homeless in the Southern Gulf region as the result of Friday's hurricane and preparations are being made throughout the state to rush supplies, tents and funds to them. The storm swept area extends from Corpus Christi south to Brownsville and inland from twenty to fifty miles. The death toll was placed at fifteen to sixteen Monday and the total property loss at $2,000,000.

ASQUITH ANSWERS
CHARGE ENGLAND
BLOCKS PEACE

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Germany has shown no disposition toward peace, except on terms dishonorable and humiliating to some of the allies, Premier Asquith informed the house of commons Monday afternoon.

The prime minister's statement was made in answer to assertions by Under Secretary Zimmermann of the German foreign office, who told a Hungarian newspaper recently that it was England that was blocking peace.

Zimmermann's statement that England prevented her allies from showing a disposition toward peace is untrue, Asquith said. He reminded the German foreign office official that Germany has never submitted official terms of peace.

BRITISH CRUISERS
SUNK IN THE NORTH SEA

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Two British light cruisers, the Nottingham and Falmouth, were sunk Saturday in the North sea by German submarines, while the vessels were searching for the German high seas fleet, according to an official announcement issued by the admiralty shortly before midnight.

Both fleets entered the North Sea at practically the same time, but the Kaiser's ships hurriedly steamed back toward Helgoland when the British craft were sighted. The British gave chase, according to the admiralty, and ran afoul of the German submarines.

One German submarine was destroyed by the British, while another was rammed and possibly sunk, according to the admiralty statement.

Germans Avoid Battle
The statement follows:
"Reports from our lookout squadrons and other units showed that there was considerable activity on the part of the enemy in the North Sea Saturday, the 19th.

"In searching for the enemy we lost two cruisers by submarine attacks—H. M. S. Nottingham, Captain C. B. Miller, and H. M. S. Falmouth, Captain John Edwards.

"All the officers of the former were saved, but thirty-eight of the crew are missing. All the officers and men of the Falmouth were saved, but one leading stoker, Norman Fry, died of injuries.

"An enemy submarine was destroyed and another was rammed and possibly sunk.

Deny Destroyer Sunk
"There is no truth in the German statement that a British Destroyer was sunk and a British battleship damaged."

The Nottingham was a vessel of 5,400 tons and was built in Pembroke in 1913.

The Falmouth was of 5,250 tons.

German Diver Active
BERLIN, Aug. 21.—By Wireless.—The admiralty announced Sunday that a German submarine sank a small cruiser and a destroyer near the British coast and damaged another small cruiser and a battleship.

Henry C. Bergman Shocked to Death at Janesville When He Lifts Charged
Wire

HE DIED INSTANTLY

and Native of the Village

Henry C. Bergman, well-known La Crosse man and manager of the John Gund Brewing company agency at Janesville, was instantly killed Sunday morning when he attempted to remove a heavily charged telephone or electric wire from the sidewalk near his home at Janesville. Pot's hands were terribly burned by the heavy voltage.

Meager reports of the accident as received by relatives in this city were to the effect that Mr. Bergman was walking over to a neighbor's house about 8 o'clock in the morning. The wire which was hanging down from overhead trees was directly in the pathway of pedestrians, and when Mr. Bergman endeavored to remove it to one side to prevent any possibility of danger, he was electrocuted.

Mr. Bergman was about 35 years of age, was born at Hokah, Minn., and is survived by his wife and an eight-year-old son. Mrs. Bergman was formerly Miss Hilda Scharpf, 315 South Sixth street. Definite funeral arrangements have not been made, but it is very likely that the body will be brought to La Crosse for interment.

The death of Mr. Bergman raises an interesting question of the legal liability of the electric light company and the telephone company for negligence in maintaining their wires, and whether or not they are liable for the injury done to a person who voluntarily removes the wire to a place of safety. Friends in this city entertain the theory that an electric wire crossed the wire of the telephone company and that this caused his death.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Secretary of State Lansing on Monday admitted that an investigation is being made of charges that Ramon Valdes, newly elected president of Panama, was instrumental in getting a land concession, estimated at about 60,000 acres, for a Spaniard named Fernandez. It has been reported that the United States may not recognize Valdes because of alleged frauds and coercion in his election.

CAMP WILSON, Texas, Aug. 21.—"Folks at home, you ought to be ashamed of yourselves," say the members of the Third regiment sanitary troops. "To think that you would do up that bix in such nice shape and forget the most important thing of all—smokin'."

"It was indeed thoughtful, folks," they say, "to send the decks of cards. We'll stage a man's sized poker game bright and early on payday morn, and some lucky chap ought to make a cleaning. It was also thoughtful of you to send those several hundred cards to keep score in the game."

"500"—not that anybody knows how to play "500," but they are very pretty and kind of nice to have around. "The stories were delightful.

"And the peppermint candy! How wonderful it was!

"And who was the noble minded person who put the bunch of socialist literature in the box? It came in handy because we were a little short of matches.

"But, you know, after digging down through all these delightful surprises we came to the bottom and our hearts sank, for we thought sure that snuggling against the bottom boards would be some smokin'."

"You know, folks, an old corn cob stuffed to the brim and burning bright is to a soldier what inspiration is to a spring poet. Especially when he is broke, payday is in the far distance, and he has scraped the old pouch clean, would a good deep inhale make him feel as though he was dancing away on the fluffy clouds while the lambs gambled and those gents with hoofs of classic fame played spring songs on guaranteed 14-karat plated harps.

"Now, folks, don't feel bad, for the candy was nice, and everything else was nice, and the boys knew you were thinking of them, and that in itself was enough to make the old world look rosy, but folks, if you want an extra blessing from the bunch down here, put a couple of corn cobs and nickel packages of smokin' in the next box."

He Goes Home
C. P. Sylvester of Company D, Third infantry, has been transferred to the reserve, upon completing his service of three years, and has left for Wisconsin.

Waska's Armadillo
Frank Waska of Company M, Third infantry, La Crosse, went out with some other soldiers on a hunting expedition. They came to a hole and Frank pushed a stick into it. An armadillo shot out between his legs with such speed that Frank lost his breath. The armadillo is a favorite pet in camp. There is one in nearly every company. Some are little fellows and others are full grown.

John Utermoehl of Company M is the pride of tent No. 4. The occupants of that tent declare he is the model soldier of the camp, for he not only drills every day but is on the job to guard against all foes at night. John is a sleep walker, and often after he has retired he gets up, places his rifle on his shoulder and marches up and down until the others put him back to bed. In the big tents at Camp Wilson John marches around the tent pole on the inside, but now that he is sleeping a little pup tent he walks around outside. One night his companions say, he shook a box of dishes, thinking he had a dinner bell in his hand.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Bulgarian troops have captured the village of Vichill, southeast of Florina, it was officially announced Monday afternoon. Another Serbian position was stormed and captured at Malkanisze Planira.

SALONIKA, Aug. 21.—Bulgarian forces are advancing south of the Greek town of Florina, despite stubborn Serbian resistance. Stubborn fighting continued all day Saturday near Banitz, thirty-one miles northwest of Salonika.

ATHENS, Aug. 21.—Bulgarian troops are reported within ten miles of the Greek port of Kavala, in their advance to attack the allies' right wing.

The Greek cabinet has been called into special session because of the Bulgarian advance into Greek territory. Generals Moschopoulos, Sotillis and Ghenadis attending the conference.

(Kavala—a port of about 5,000 population with considerable trade—was taken from Turkey by Greece in the Balkan wars. It lies eighteen miles west of the Bulgarian border and has long been coveted by the Bulgars).

The government is watching the Bulgarian invasion of Greek territory with the greatest interest. The newspaper Paris says the cabinet will far have reached no decision and will await further developments.

From a military standpoint the Bulgarian advance is considered unimportant as far as the allies are concerned. The Bulgarians are apparently trying to seize strategic points on all the allied flank, from which to deliver attacks when the expected Anglo-French drive begins.

Bulgars Strike Southward
SALONIKA, Aug. 21.—Bulgarian forces are engaged in sharp fighting with the Serbs on a fifteen mile front seventy miles northwest of Salonika.

The Bulgars emerged from the village of Florina and attempted an advance southward. At the same time, other strong Bulgarian detachments attempted on offensive along the Monastir-Salonika. The Serbs drove in the right flank of the Bulgarian force from Florina, forcing the enemy back upon the town and at the same time made vigorous attack eastward as far as Lake Ostrovo. Fighting is still going on.

Incessant skirmishes between patrols and frequent infantry engagements in which whole regiments have taken part are reported on the British and French fronts along the whole Greek border east of Lake Doiran. In the Doiran district particularly hot artillery struggles have occurred.

Airmen on both sides are very active. Hostile aeroplanes attempted a raid on allied positions south of Doiran, but were driven back by allied aviators.

Rochester Expert Prevents Exhumation of Body of Supposed Paralysis Victim

Although their attempt to disprove that eleven-year-old Virginia Martin died of infantile paralysis resulted in failure, Trempealeau health authorities are still persuaded that the diagnosis of the girl's illness was mistaken. This was told the TRIBUNE by Dr. E. D. Pierce, the city's health officer.

Exhumation of the little girl's body, which was to have taken place Saturday afternoon was abandoned on advice of a pathological expert connected with the Mayo hospital at Rochester, Minn. When consulted over the telephone regarding the case, he said that any pathological indications that could be found in the spinal cord vanish forty-eight hours after death, and that any examination he could make would be unsatisfactory.

Dr. Pierce re-iterated his statement of Saturday that the symptoms in the case were variant from those normally present in infantile paralysis. He based his statement, he said, on what the girl's family had told him of her condition preceding death. The Martin home is under quarantine. Dr. Pierce has written the state board of health for instructions, and the quarantine will not be lifted for the present, even though the Trempealeau authorities doubt there is any reason for it.

With the election day only two weeks away, La Crosse today enters the most active week, politically speaking, of the pre-primary campaign. Three of the state's most important political leaders are booked for speeches here during the week, and the candidates for local offices are getting down to local offices, driving westward for substantial gains.

The Russians further advanced their lines in severe fighting along the Stochod northeast of Kovel Sunday, it was officially announced Monday, making progress near Toboly and in the region of Rudka Czerwische.

In Friday and Saturday's fighting on this front, 1,366 prisoners, one cannon, 18 machine guns and other material were captured.

Realizing that General Bothmer's army has been crushed, the Germans began stripping their modern front of every available man and sending them southward to defend Lemberg. It was while this troop movement was under way that Brusiloff struck further north with his right wing. His flanking attack menaces both Kovel and the German army at Pinsk. The Russian attack upon Kovel from the east has practically been ceased.

During the lull on the Kovel front, the Russian armies under Generals Kaledin, Sakharoff and Letchitsky swung westward like a deadly pendulum from Kovel, as a pivot, crush Bothmer's army along the Stripa. Like the movement of a pendulum, the advance was proportionately faster in the extreme south. Expert opinion here believes that more depends upon Brusiloff's campaign than the mere stand or fall of Lemberg and Kovel. Prisoners say that the northeastern part of Hungary is being evacuated by civilians because of the Russian advance near Koromezo.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Negotiations by President Wilson to prevent the threatened railroad strike took a more favorable turn Monday afternoon.

When more than two scores railroad executives, representing the leading lines of the country, went into conference with the president at 2:30 it was admitted they were prepared to enter into a full discussion of details relative to the president's proposition designed to avert the great strike.

The nature of the discussion could not be learned, but it is understood to hinge upon what the government will promise by interstate commerce commission work on railroad rate adjustment and what the president holds out for the future solution of similar crises by arbitration.

Two presidents were in conference here late Monday afternoon forming the final answer they will make to the proposals advanced by President Wilson in an effort to avert a strike that would paralyze the nation.

The heads of the great system went into secret session after hearing an impassioned appeal by the president of the United States to "keep the railroads running," not only in the interests of this country, but in order to meet the demands of the entire world.

The fact that the presidents have reached a point where they wish to enter into a discussion of details of the proposal was regarded as indicating the disposition on the part of the executives to reject the proposition flatly is not unanimous, but rather that a strong sentiment prevails that it should be carefully considered.

Loss of millions of dollars in crops throughout the country in event of a railroad strike was the possibility before the administration Monday.

The treasury department reported that agents of the federal reserve board in the south, west and northwest are beginning to ask for funds for the annual "crop moving" period. A tie-up of the railroads of the country would mean that wheat and other products now ready for the mills would be held up indefinitely and possibly rot on side tracks if stopped in transit.

This angle of the situation was borne home to the officials, not only by reports from the treasury department, but by the arrival of western railroad presidents such as Louis W. Hill, whose father's name was synonymous with "the empire of the northwest," and its wealth of farmlands.

More than two score railroad representatives held separate meetings Monday to continue discussion of President Wilson's proposals looking toward peace.

Arrange for Conference

The railroad presidents, augmented by the new arrivals, arranged for a new conference with President Wilson at 2:30 o'clock. It is understood the president earlier in the day had suggested such a meeting in response to intimations that the railway heads desired further development of some of the ideas expressed in his public statement Saturday. They want to know what may be expected in the way of co-operation from the interstate commerce commission in case of necessary rate adjustments and also what the president may have in mind regarding future prevention of crises like the present.

The railway presidents accepted the president's invitation unwillingly. They had other plans, one of which was to see the president Tuesday and then hold a meeting of their own Wednesday at the Metropolitan club.

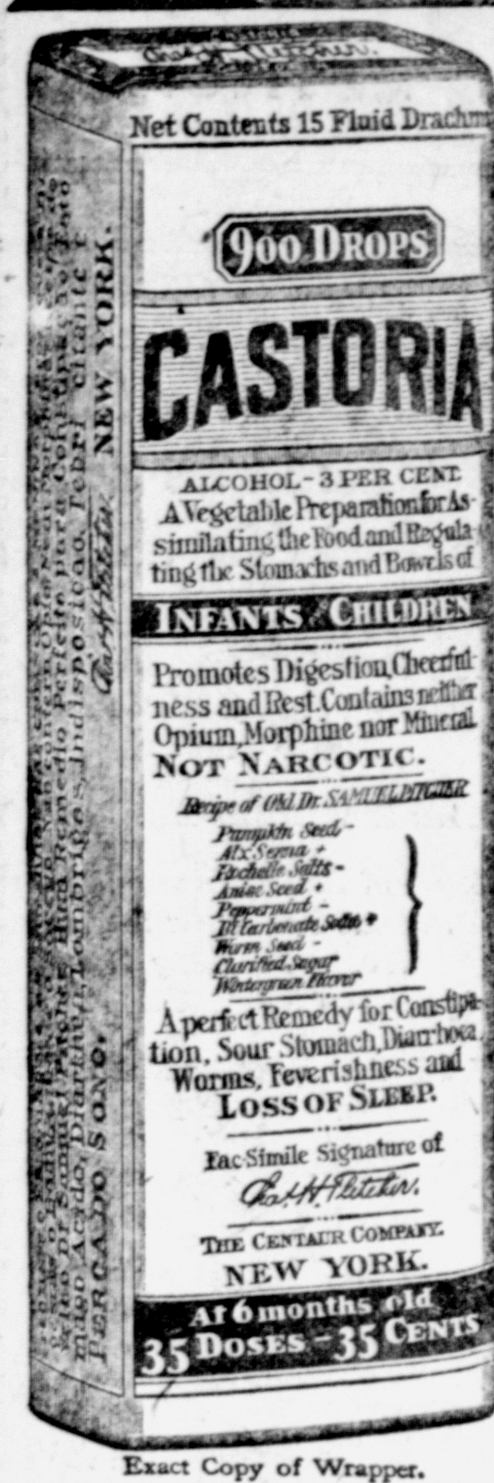

An outstanding feature of the gathering of railway presidents on Thursday was that there appeared to be no organized plan afoot to meet the situation created by the president's firm refusal to recede from his demands on them.

They anticipated that still other railway executives may be called to Washington by the president, they said.

For their part, the brotherhood representatives, through A. B. Garretson, made it known that they do not intend to deviate from the president's plan.

Upon the final decision of the railroad executives and the final action taken by the president, it would appear from Garretson's statement, de-

DEATH OF RUSHFORD WOMAN VERY SUDDEN

RUSHFORD, Minn.—(Special.)—Rushford was shocked Thursday afternoon, when the news spread that Mrs. D. J. Shriver, of Rushford avenue, had suddenly died at her home. She had but the day before remarked to those of her household that she believed she had never felt better than then and but a few moments before her death had been about her usual home tasks.

Having sat down in a chair a moment to rest, she was seen to throw her head forward in a peculiar manner and when her husband went to her and endeavored to find if she was ill, she could not speak. A physician was immediately called but was unable, upon his arrival, to do aught for her. She was planning to attend a surprise party upon a neighbor that afternoon and therefore could have no presentiment of trouble.

It is supposed that death was due to heart trouble. Mrs. Shriver leaves her husband, one son, Archie; one sister, Miss Hattie Bauman; and three brothers, Carl, John and Will, the three last named residing in Winona, the others in this city.

Local and Personal
Word from residents of Castlewood, N. D., state that that city was swept by fire a short time ago and much damage done. Among the business men who suffered losses was Mr. E. V. St. John of Vinegar Hill. Mr. St. John owns a pool hall that, with contents, was valued at about $500.00 and although his loss was not so great as some others, it amounts up to a good deal. About $100.00 worth of stock was burned in the hall; the rest being saved by quick work.

Rev. J. C. Bantley is busily engaged in taking the school census in this city this week.

The old saying that "Misery Loves Company" seems to have been tested rather severely in one instance, at least, lately. When Theodore Anderson, of this city, found several days ago, that it was necessary for him to go down to La Crosse to have an operation performed at one of the hospitals there, he dreaded, to some extent, the lonesome time anticipated in recovering. He had been in the hospital but a few days, however, when his brother, Ed Anderson, of Choice, Minn., was taken very ill at his home and the trouble diagnosed as appendicitis; with an immediate trip to the hospital for an operation as the remedy. The two brothers are now at the same hospital, the Lutherans; both having submitted to operations and at this writing, doing as well as can be expected. Their sister, Miss Jennie Anderson, of this city, accompanied each of the brothers, upon the trip and stayed with them a few days.

The Watona Campfire Girls, a jolly bunch whose director is Miss Gvda Magnesson, held an ice cream social upon the lawn of the William Burtner home Saturday evening, August 19. The girls are a very "nifty" appearing lot when attired in the costumes, which they wore while waiting upon the public at the social.

Ralph Baerman is the guest of his aunt and other relatives in Houston. This city proposes to again have a Fall Festival, the event to take place about the first of October. The event will be in line with the other Fall Festivals which were held here some two or three years ago. It is to be hoped that this year the weather man will be kind enough to give us a better brand of weather than that sent last time, when continual rain made the affair assume something of the "soupy" order as regards the condition of the streets.

The two young ladies who were reported to be severely injured in an auto accident near here a few days ago, are now perfectly recovered. It seems that the accident was not so serious as at first reported, but still enough to frighten the friends and relatives when they first learned of it.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE

The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

The doctor came in, and bandaged the swollen purple ankle. Then they had dinner, they tried to remember to call it luncheon, but never succeeded! After that, the whole parsonage family grouped about the little single bed in the cheery sitting-room.

"Whose coat is this, Prudence?" asked Connie.

"And where in the world did you get those towels and silk shirts?" added Fairy.

Prudence blushed most exquisitely. "They are Mr. Hamner's," she said, and glanced nervously at her father.

"Whose?" chorused the family. And it was plain to be seen that Lark was ready to take mental notes with an eye to future stories.

"If you will sit down and keep still, I will tell you all about it. But you must not interrupt me. What time is it, Fairy?"

"Two o'clock."

"Oh, two. Then I have plenty of time. Well, when I got to that little cross-cut through the hickory grove, about four miles out from town, I thought I would coast down the long hill. Do you remember that hill, father? There was no one in sight, and no animals, except one hoary old mule, grazing at the bottom. It was irresistible, absolutely irresistible. So I coasted. But you know yourself, father, there is no trusting a mule. They are the most undependable animals." Prudence looked thoughtfully down at the bed for a moment, and added slowly, "Still, I have no hard feelings against the mule. In fact, I kind of like him—Well, anyway, just as I got to the critical place in the hill, that mule skipped right in front of me. It looked as though he did it on purpose. I did not have time to get out of his way, and it never occurred to him to get out of mine, and so I went bang! right into his wheel, and upset me quite a little. But that mule never budged! Jerry—Mr. Hamner—Mr. Hamner, you know—said he believed an earthquake could coast downhill on to that mule without seriously inconveniencing him. I was hurt a little, and couldn't get up. And so he jumped over the fence—No, Connie, not the mule, of course! Mr. Hamner! He jumped over the fence, and put his coat on the ground, and made a pillow for me with the shirts and towels in his bag, and carried me over. Then he wanted to go for a wagon to bring me home, but I was too nervous and scared, so he stayed with me. Then Mr. Davis came along with his cart, and Jerry—Mr. Hamner, you know, helped me in, and the cart was so small they both had to walk."

"Where is he now?" "Is he young?" "Is he handsome?" "Did he look rich?"

"Don't be silly, girls. He went to the hotel, I suppose. Anyway, he left us as soon as we reached town. He said he was in a hurry, and had something to look after. His coat was underneath me in the wagon, and he wouldn't take it out for fear of hurting my ankle, so the poor soul is probably wandering around this town in his shirt-sleeves."

Already, in the eyes of the girls, this Jerry—Mr. Hamner, had taken unto himself all the interest of the affair.

"He'll have to come for his coat," said Lark. "We're bound to see him."

"Where does he live? What was he doing in the hickory grove?" inquired Mr. Starr with a strangely sinking heart, for her eyes were alight with new and wonderful radiance.

"He lives in Des Moines. He was just walking into town, and took a short cut through the grove."

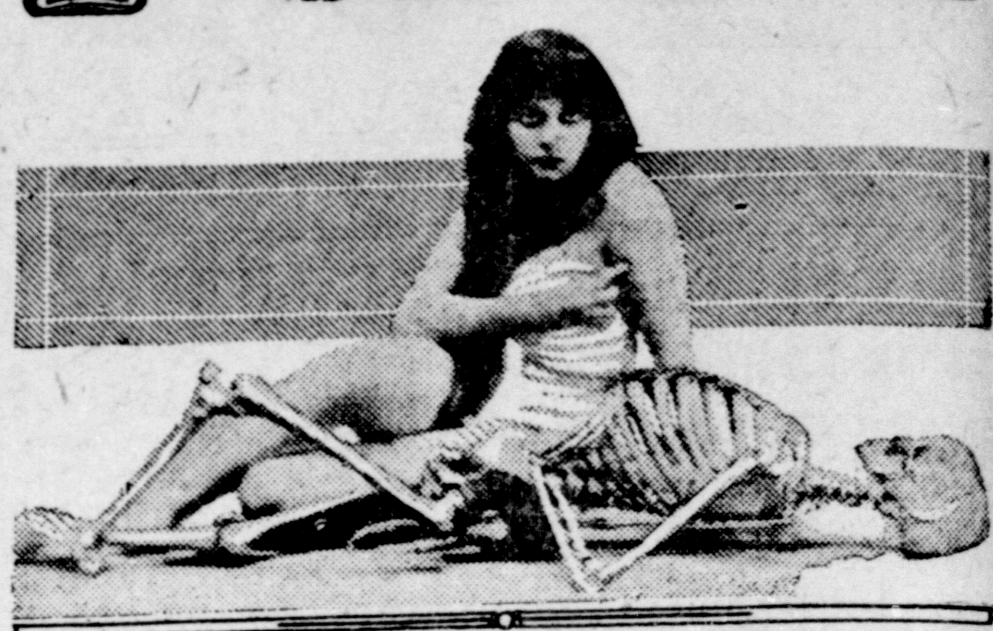

"Walking! From Des Moines?" Prudence flushed uncomfortably. "I didn't think of that," she said. "But I do not see why he should not walk if he likes. He's strong and athletic, and fond of exercise. I guess he's plenty able to walk if he wants to. I'm sure he's no tramp, father, if that is what you are thinking."

"I am not thinking anything of the kind, Prudence," he said with dignity. "But I do think it rather strange that a young man should set out to walk from Des Moines to Mount Mark. And why should he be at it so early in the morning? Doesn't he require sleep, as the rest of us do?"

"How should I know? I guess if he likes to be out in the morning when it is fresh and sweet, it is all right. I like the morning myself. I had as much right out early as he had. His clothes were nice, and he was dusty, but not soiled or worn. Anyway, he is coming at four o'clock. If you want to ask if he is a tramp, you can do it." And Prudence burst into tears.

Dramatic silence in the cheerful sitting-room! Then Fairy began bustling about to bathe the face and throat of "poor little Prudence," and her father said sympathetically: "You're all nervous and wrought up, with the pain and excitement, Prudence. I'm glad he is coming so we can thank him for his kindness. It was mighty lucky he happened along, wasn't it? A Harvard graduate! Yes, they are pretty strong on athletics at Harvard. You'd better straighten this room a little and have things looking nice when he gets here," said Father Starr, with great diplomacy. And he was rewarded, and startled, by observing that Prudence brightened wonderfully at his words.

"Yes, do," she urged eagerly. "Get some of the roses from the corner bush, and put them on the table there. And when you go up-stairs, Fairy, you'd better bring down that little lace spread in the bottom drawer of our dresser. It'll look very nice on this bed—Work hard, girls, and get everything looking fine. He'll be here at four, he said. You twins may wear your white dresses, and Connie must put on her blue and wear her blue bows—Fairy, do you think it would be all right for you to wear your silk dress? Of course, the silk is rather grand for home, but you do look so beautiful in it. Father, will you put on your black suit, or are you too busy? And don't forget to wear the pearl cuff buttons Aunt Grace sent you."

He went upstairs to obey, with despair in his heart. But to the girls, there was nothing strange in this exactness on the part of Prudence. Jerrold Harmer was the hero of the romance, and they must unite to do him honor. He was probably a prince in disguise. Jerrold Harmer was a perfectly thrilling name. It was really a shame that America allowed no titles—Lord Jerrold did sound so noble, and Lady Prudence was very effective, too. He and Prudence were married, and had a family of four children, named for the various Starrs, before one hour had passed.

The Sidney Drews are making a comedy entitled, "When a Feller Needs a Friend." Part of it was sea stuff and they went down to their summer home at Seagate, N. No one could be sufficiently nonchalant for comedy ease, so the press agent reports, until motor boats were produced to patrol the deep. Mr. Drew's attitude was that he didn't so much mind dying, but he did object to the event being messy. "I've a feeling," said he, "that I may say something clever on my deathbed. "Yes, that's good," said Carol approvingly. "It must be a sixty cylinder, eight horsepower—er—Ford, or something real big and costly."

"Twins! You won't be ready," warned Prudence, and his dire possibility sent them flying upstairs in a panic.

While the girls, bubbling over with excitement, were dressing for the great event, Mr. Starr went downstairs to sit with Prudence. Carol called to him on his way down, and he passed on the staircase, looking up at her.

BODILY HOUSEKEEPING

BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.

The subject of drinking water with meals has been misunderstood for a hundred years.

In recent years investigation by means of X-rays, the observations of scientists such as Cannon, Grutner, Pavlov, Fowler, Hawk, prove that an abundance of water taken during digestion is necessary in good bodily housekeeping. Drink plenty of water with each meal. Do not drink ice-water at any time.

If your kidneys are sick, or you suffer with lumbago or rheumatism at times, pain in the back or back of the neck, take a little "Anuric" before meals. This can be found at any good drug store. Therefore my advice to young or old is, always drink plenty of pure water. And for long life occasionally take tablets of "Anuric" three or four times a day.

TOMMY GIVES IN

BY LOUISE OLIVER
(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Tommy was rebellious. "Oh, thunder, I don't want to get married."

Mrs. Bolton's lorgnette went up. "Thomas!"

"Oh, Well!" Tommy hung his head under her austere gaze. "Why does every one have to pick on a fellow when he is having a good time?"

"Because your father and I know what is best for you. Marry Genevieve Sawyer and you will be happy. Marry some silly chit without money, brains or breeding and you'll be sorry the rest of your life. You'll see," more tenderly, "we know you better than you know yourself, Thomas. Besides, when your father has worked for years amassing a fortune it's but natural that he should have an interest in the person who will help spend it."

"Give me time, mother. But it seems to me that you and dad are doing the very thing they're trying to break up in China. I'll bet the girl's tickled to death about it same as me," sourly.

"She's got sense and she'll do what she's told."

"I hate highbrows!"

"She isn't a—she's the vulgar thing you call her just because she took highest honors at college." Mrs. Bolton picked up her embroidery and Tommy sighed with relief. The grilling was at an end. This was not the first time the subject had been broached to him.

"I guess I'll go fishing!" Tommy lit a cigarette and stepped off the porch. The Bolton lodge was on one of the many islands in the chain of Canadian lakes. Boats took the place of automobiles.

Once out of sight, Tommy dug down for a leather pocketbook and from the neatly arranged bills and papers he fished a bit of rag. He held it tenderly in the palm of his hand for a minute, smiling reminiscently. It was thin, white stuff, embroidered in pink and blue daisies, with a delicate tracery of green leaf. The edges were frayed and torn. Scissors had never detached that piece from the original garment. Tommy knew that. He put it back tenderly and went toward the boat landing still dreaming. He wondered where the girl was and who she was—the owner of the dress. He had found her in a boat in a little deserted cove at sunset, her engine gone dead, and there she was waiting patiently for deliverance like a demure little Thumbeline on her water lily leaf.

Tommy had chugged around the corner and stopped.

"Hello!" he called.

"Hello!" she answered.

"What's wrong?"

"I don't know!"

"Want a lift?"

"Yes, indeed!"

"Then I'm the person you're looking for. But you'll have to get in here. I can't tow you—I've no line."

"Thank you. If you'll pull me off at the hotel, I can get my boat in the morning." She stood up and there was a sound of ripping and tearing as one of the flounces caught and held.

"Oh, what a rotten shame!" he sympathized, reaching over and trying to help her extricate herself.

"I can't help it and it's too late to go home for another," she said. "I'm dining with the Merricks and Alice can pin me up some way."

Free at last, she stepped into the seat beside him and Tommy slipped the bit of muslin into a pocket and happily settled himself beside her and turned the boat toward her destination.

Then he lost her! Next day he went to the hotel only to find that the Merricks had departed. He called himself a fool and everything else in the calendar for not finding out her name before.

He continued his search disconsolately for days, each hour thinking of some new charm and almost wearing out his ragged souvenir with looking at it. "She was just the girl for me," he sighed. "Little, pretty, curly hair, peachy lips, teasing eyes, jolly, dandy teeth, and I'll bet she didn't know a Latin grammar from a cook book. I'll bet she doesn't wear awning stripes either. That dress just suited her. Sweet and pretty and kind of fairy like." And lovesick Tommy would take out the sample again.

Genevieve Sawyer indeed! Days passed, weeks passed, months passed. Boltons had closed their cottages and returned to New York. Tommy had given up loafing and was working hard in his father's bank. From pure weariness and discouragement, he had almost given in about Genevieve Sawyer, although he had never seen her, the family not having come back to the city.

The first of November came. Tommy was getting restless again.

"May I have next week off, dad? I think, if you don't mind, I'll go up to Danny's in Maine and shoot a bit."

"Sure, boy, go if you wish," Bolton, senior, was pleased with Tommy these days. He had his heart set on the Sawyer alliance. Besides, he liked Tommy's growing energy for business.

So Tommy, with bag and gun case, rapped one evening at Danny's cottage and old Martha let him in.

"Bless me, it's the boy, Dan!" Tommy shook hands with the old hunter, who patted his shoulder affectionately with his other gnarled hand. "We'd sure miss you, Tom, if you didn't come. The woods are thick with game this year and you're wise to come early."

After supper, the men settled down to talk and Martha sat sewing by the fire. Strip after strip she sewed end to end, rolling them into a ball for the weaver. "It's for rag rugs for the new lodge up yonder," she explained. "The missus sent me bushels of things to cut up. Here's one finished. She proudly held up a rug, all the colors of the rainbow.

"Pretty very," agreed Tommy. "One wouldn't think rags could be made into that." His eyes wandered over the heap on the floor. Suddenly he saw something—a piece of white thin stuff, embroidered in pink and blue daisies.

"Where did you get this, Martha?" springing to his feet and holding the strip toward her.

"Why, that came with the rest of the things Mrs. Sawyer sent. One of Miss Genevieve's dresses, I suppose."

"Genevieve Sawyer!" Tommy was sure he had lost his senses. "Are the Sawyers here?"

"They built the new lodge," explained Danny. "Ye ought to see it! Some day Miss Genevieve wants to go hunting with me. D'ye care if we take her?"

"No," agreed Tommy huskily. "We might take her tomorrow."

Danny was trailing a deer. Tommy, perfectly happy, was breaking frosty underbrush for Genevieve to get through. The girl, to a casual observer, was as happy as Tommy and in her fawn-colored hunting suit was as pretty as she was in the pink and blue summer frock.

Suddenly Tommy turned. "Say, what's the difference between a Latin grammar and a cook book?"

She thought a moment. "Why, I don't know. What's the answer?" she asked.

Tommy caught her hand and looked into her eyes. "The answer is," he said deliberately, "that I'm going to marry you, dear, if you'll have me?"

WOMAN GRADUATE BLACKSMITH

Blacksmithing is no longer a trade. It has been developed into a skilled profession and like all other supposedly masculine callings has been invaded by woman. The first graduate woman blacksmith on record from the Iowa State College a few weeks ago. Her name is Miss Tura Hawke and she is preparing to open a blacksmith shop of her own soon in which she will specialize in the repairing of farm machinery. During her college course she did this work successfully, standing at the forge, welding, riveting and handling hot irons just as men in her class did.

CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT MEANS SUCCESS FOR LABOR, SAYS HUGHES

BY PERRY ARNOLD

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 21.—Speaking before 1,000 workingmen at the Union Iron works during the noon hour Saturday, Charles E. Hughes urged contentment "through co-operative effort," and announced his advocacy of old age pensions.

The presidential candidate was introduced by Ignatius Sullivan, a machinist, clad in overalls and jumper, who stood beside Hughes while he made a brief speech.

Even with his remarkable memory the oldest inhabitant fails to recall that he has inflicted his reminiscences on everybody he knows.

PARADING UNDER FALSE COLORS

The stalwart candidates are parading under false colors. They are everywhere advertised as the "republican candidates"; their headquarters are labeled "republican headquarters"; their platform, the "republican platform". Mr. Jeffris is advertised as the candidate for United States senator on the ticket with the republican nominees for president and vice president, and he and his friends are apparently endeavoring to create the impression that he is the only candidate for the republican nomination for that office.

These tactics are dishonest and misleading. They look like attempts to obtain votes under false pretenses. According to the spirit of the primary law, Governor Philipp, Mr. Jeffris, and the other stalwart leaders are candidates for the republican nomination for the respective offices they seek, but they will not be THE CANDIDATES OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY unless they are nominated as such at the primary on September 5. The distinction is obvious. They can offer no valid excuse for usurping the party name before the primary.

But this is not the first offense of its kind that has been perpetrated by the leaders of this faction. In every political contest since 1904 they tried to use and make capital of the word "republican". In 1904, after the supreme court read Mr. Jeffris and his fellow bolters out of the republican party, they adopted the name "national republican" in an effort to hitch their go-devil to the Roosevelt band-wagon. In another campaign they called themselves "Taft republicans", for reasons that are obvious. Later they became the "regular republicans", probably to hide their irregularities.

In the present campaign they are even bolder and less scrupulous. They say that the conventions which named their candidates were called by the republican state central committee and therefore they have a right to be called republicans. But where does the state central committee derive the power to call a nominating convention? The law which authorizes the selection of party committees also defines their duties and powers, but the calling of conventions for the purpose of selecting party candidates is not among them. On the contrary, the law distinctly provides that party candidates shall be chosen at a primary.

Compare the stalwart methods with those of the progressive republicans. Did the latter ever parade under false colors? Did they ever attempt to ride to victory on the coat tail of the presidential candidate? Did they ever call theirs the "republican ticket" before the primary? No, never. Not even when they controlled all the machinery of the republican party within the state.

The use of the party name before the primary, in the manner described, cannot be justified by any existing moral or statute law. The practice is the most flagrant chicanery and merits the contempt of all patriotic citizens who believe that parties should be used as a means to secure good government, not as expedients to secure nominations.

MAKE PLAIN THE DIMMER LAW

The need of a definition of what shall constitute a legal "dimmer" in La Crosse was made plain in the case of Joe Geiwitz, charged with running his car without dimmers. The defendant testified that his lights had been reduced by the use of whitening, and Chief Webber said the same material was used on the police car. There was some discrepancy in the testimony, probably due to confusion of cars in the night, for certainly none will suspect either Mr. Geiwitz or Chief Webber of falsification.

Law is presumed to be just, and where the rule is not so explicit that every man knows just what he may and what he may not do, there is no justice. There is no justice where courts may say that this method was sufficient and that method insufficient, excepting where sufficiency is defined by law.

The importance of the Geiwitz case is not that a citizen did or did not pay a fine. It is important only as it goes to the question of whether there is justice in the decision. If the court was convinced by the conflicting evidence that Mr. Geiwitz was operating his car without dimmers, the verdict was right to the best of his judgment; if the court merely decided that a dimmer process admittedly used by the officer who made the arrest, was insufficient, either in principle or application, in the case of the defendant, there was no justice.

It is the plain duty of the city council to adopt an ordinance so plain that every citizen shall know what his dimmer must be.

"PLATTSBURG OF THE WEST" OPENS AT SALT LAKE CITY

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Aug. 21.—A western Plattsburg opened with 600 Rocky Mountain rookies in khaki on the broad Fort Douglas parade ground here Monday.

Over the nearby hills and in camp the 600 will be drilled in the art of warfare for the next month. Bankers, cowboys, clerks, merchants and professional men are among the number.

Three of the coast artillery companies form the skeleton of the campment. Infantry fighting will be the principal study, but instruction also will be given in other branches of army service.

All the 600 volunteers had their traveling expenses paid by the government. When the camp ends September 16, the men will turn in their equipment and receive $5 of the $15 each advanced to the government for expenses.

On the same program will be shown a Pathe Gold Rooster play, "Madame X," featuring Dorothy Donnelly. The play was produced by Henry W. Savage and is in six reels.

THE TRIBUNE'S DAILY TRAVELETTE

(By Nixab)

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE

New York's great opera house is more than a palace of song. It is an institution, and landmark, a study in contrasts, a sociological syllabus and a museum of temperament all in one. It is also a brick building of unlovely outline and a depressed and billous hue, where the world's greatest music is poured forth for the delectation of American audiences in spite of the fact, which foreigners like to mention, that we are the most unartistic of peoples.

The patrons of the Metropolitan Opera House may be divided into several classes. There are the men who go to hear the music, and the others who go because it is the thing to do. There are the mighty ones who must attend because their station in life demands, it, and the curious ones who go to look at the latter class.

There are the persons who seem to buy tickets for the sole purpose of whispering in the pianissimo passages and applauding when the prima donna pauses for breath in the middle of the principal aria. This gives yet another class its innings—the erudites who hiss like overburdened steam radiators and show their superior knowledge. Add to these the woman who comes to scan the boxes and get fashion tips, and the list is roughly complete.

The music-lovers of the more impecunious sort are mostly foreigners. This is the class that recruits the long waiting line which stands in the rain for an hour before the box-office opens, stretching up Broadway to Thirty-eighth street and half way around to Seventh avenue. When the doors swing back they buy standing room and fight for a place on the rail. They sit on the floor between acts and clutch you by the arm as the melodies move their souls.

Meanwhile society arranges itself in layers, like geologic strata, ranging from the gold and diamond-bearing ing beds of the boxes to the common clay in the topmost gallery. It is a monstrous sea of human faces that the singers see from the stage, rising wave on wave in the dimness until the last wave is lost in the semi-darkness under the roof. The curtains rise, the conductor stabs the air with his baton. The worship of the Muse and Harmony has begun.

FARMERS OBJECT TO HEAVINESS OF FARM MACHINERY SOLD THEM

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 21.—A committee of South American farmers Monday complained bitterly to representatives of agricultural implement concerns in the United States against the heaviness of farm machinery, particularly horse-drawn equipment, that North American manufacturers ship into this territory and try to persuade them to buy.

German manufacturers whose trade is now cut off, had studied the South American farmer's desires in this respect and gave him what he wanted. The smaller, lighter German machinery was purchased and the heavy North American product let alone.

Today the American agents, as the only machinery men in the field, are trying to compel the farmers to buy heavy implements on the theory that a big machine can do more work at a relatively lower initial cost and less power, proportionately, than a smaller one. The weakness of their argument is that the South American horse is small and light and can't draw a heavy load.

STRIKERS THREATENED WITH LOSS OF ALL APPEAL TO EXECUTIVE

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 21.—Threatened with the loss of their homes and small savings accounts and even with imprisonment, 300 striking iron moulders Saturday wired an appeal to J. F. Valentine of Cincinnati, president of the Iron Moulders' union of North America.

Deputy sheriffs, as rapidly as possible, are attaching the little cottages owned by the strikers and their bank accounts under a $200,000 damage action brought by four foundry companies whose men went on strike.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Always an Encore

Murphy was in the hospital and had undergone an operation. As he was recovering he remarked to the patient on his right: "I am thankful that's over."

"Oh!" exclaimed the patient, "at my operation the doctor left the scissors inside and I had to undergo the same again."

The patient on the left remarked that at his operation the sponge had been left and it all had to be gone over again.

Just as they had finished talking the doctor appeared at the door and asked:

"Has any one seen my hat?"

It was then that Murphy fainted.

Where Alice Failed
Husband (to second wife)—"You don't cook like Alice, my first wife, used to do, Mary," he said, in tones of gentle, exasperating reproof. "No; it seems to me you can't cook like she used to."

On another occasion he remarked: "You are not so smart at getting about as Alice was. You don't appear to catch on where she left off."

About this time a heavy rolling pin came in contact with his head. "What do you mean by that?" he exclaimed, in agony.

"I am doing the work that Alice neglected," she replied, with evident satisfaction.

There was more peace in that household afterward.

A Good Definition

"What is wisdom?" asked a teacher of a class of small girls. A bright-eyed little creature arose and answered: "Information of the brain."

As Good as They Gave

A small boy astride of a donkey was taking some supplies to an army camp in Texas not long ago, and got there just as a detachment of soldiers preceded by a band was marching past.

The lad dismounted and held the bridle of the donkey tightly in his hand.

"Why are you holding on to your brother so hard," asked a group of soldiers who were standing near and wanted to tease the country boy.

"I'm afraid he might enlist," said the lad, without batting an eyelash.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Mrs. Tom—My dear, how can it be possible that you have forgotten this is my birthday?

Tom—Well, you see it is only natural that I should; there isn't really a thing about you to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago.

In contemplating what he has done for others, the average man is prone to forget what the others have done for him.

Verse and Reverse

A GENTLEMAN
I knew him for a gentleman
By signs that never fail;
His coat was rough and rather worn,
His cheeks were thin and pale—
A lad who had his way to make,
With little time for play—
I knew him for a gentleman
By certain signs today.

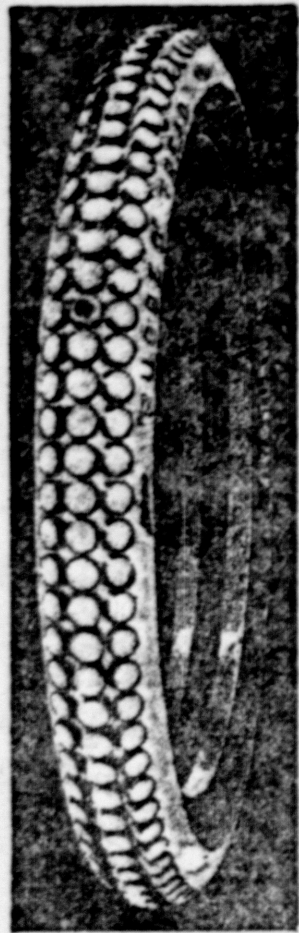

He met his mother on the street;
Off came his little cap
My door was shut; he waited there
Until I heard his rap.
He took the bundle from my hand,
He ran on errands willingly
To forge and mill and store.

He does not push and crowd along,
His voice is gently pitched;
He does not fling his books about
As if he were bewitched.
He stands aside to let you pass,
He always shuts the door.
He runs on errands willingly
To forge and mill and store.

He thinks of you before himself,
He serves you if he can,
For in whatever company
The manners make the man.
At ten or forty 'tis the same,
The manner tells the tale,
And I discern the gentleman
By signs that never fail.

FEDERAL "RUGGED TREAD" TIRES

are not a mere fanciful design. Neither are these skid-proof treads the result of chance or guesswork. "Rugged Treads" have been worked out, developed and refined according to scientific and mathematical principles.

The tough "Rugged" studs are so big and broad they give longest wear without tearing loose or breaking down. Their base is large and therefore cannot press into the fabric and break it.

Their round surfaces strike and leave the road or pavement gradually and smoothly. The three rows give perfect traction with the least amount of friction.

The outer rows are tapered so that the entire tread wears down evenly, and prevents fabric-breaking.

The three parallel rows of these round studs present at all times the same number of resisting points against skidding. No matter in what direction the wheels tend to slip, the required number of "Rugged" studs are on the job and stop it.

"Rugged Treads" are made of the very best quality of rubber. They are resilient and therefore do not cut or break, yet tough so as to give extra service in maximum wear.

The pure whiteness of Federal "Rugged Treads" is proof of their high quality and freedom from substitutes or inferior rubber. Only the purest and best rubber can be made so white. This tread is applied by new and improved methods. Under high and absolutely even pressure it is vulcanized to the carcass and becomes an integral part of the tire. Federal "Rugged Treads" cannot warp or loosen. For sale by

RADICALISM IN AMERICAN SCHOOLS SHARPLY ATTACKED

Tolerance of Idea of Materialistic Conception of History Declared a Great Evil

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Bitter denunciation of directors of American universities and colleges who "permit an alien radicalism to contaminate at the fount, the youth of our country" was contained in the report of the National Committee on Public Morals made here Monday by Edward Feeney of Brooklyn to the fifteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic societies.

"Insist that the minds of your sons be not debased," said Feeney. "Steer clear of the school that tolerates within its precincts the pagan idea of the materialistic conception of history, either through allied-brained professors or the socialistic chapter. It is up to you to demand that Marxism, immorality or disloyalty to the religion of your fathers, or to your country, not be tolerated in any form."

Proposes Catholic Theater
The Catholic theme as a means of solving the problem of regulation of motion pictures and photoplays was proposed in the report. The seriousness of the divorce evil was emphasized, and states that permit of easy divorce were scored.

Anthony Comstock, late president of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, was lauded as a "brave and unselfish fighter against impurity," in the report.

Feeney declared the persistent reports that Catholics are trying to gain control of the government was the most ridiculous of rumors.

In closing, Feeney appealed for a greater Catholic unity and asked for more help in the work of sustaining public morality among all people.

Loyalty to Nation
Undivided loyalty to God and nation was the keynote of the meetings held Monday as a part of the annual Catholic week celebration here this week, in which twenty-five thousand persons are participating.

In opening prayers, blessings were invoked upon the nation. Before the sound of religious songs died away, new voices sang patriotic airs. The papal colors—yellow and white—appear with the Stars and Stripes. Delegates are wearing miniature flags in addition to the colors of the church.

High mass for delegates to the Central Verein, held in the Church of St. John the Baptist, opened Monday's program. A pontifical mass opened the convention of the Catholic Young Men's National union. Other organizations which held opening sessions are the American Federation of Catholic societies, State League of Catholic societies and Catholic Women's union. A mass meeting in the evening at Carnegie hall to discuss the social service work being done by the American Federation of Catholic societies, was to close the day's program.

Religion Governmental Bulwark
Religion, as the bulwark of American government, was the theme of the addresses by the highest dignitaries of the Catholic church in this country, during the opening day of the week's celebration. His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, declared religion has always been the mainstay of government and urged Americans to guard against atheism and "free thought, and religious intolerance."

The presence of the three cardinals resident in the United States, John Bonzano, archbishop of Milwaukee and apostolic delegate to the United States, in addition to priests and prelates from foreign lands and every quarter of the United States, made Sunday's service one never to be forgotten. Ten thousand persons crowded into St. Patrick's Cathedral while 30,000 watched outside.

The Right Rev. Bishop Hickey of Rochester, N. Y., one of the best known orators in the Catholic church, struck a keynote of "Americanism," when he said, "We want no Catholic party in this country."

J. P. MORGAN'S SON TAKES NAVY CRUISE
The Right Rev. Bishop Hickey of Rochester, N. Y., one of the best known orators in the Catholic church, struck a keynote of "Americanism," when he said, "We want no Catholic party in this country."

One Way Out.

One of the congregation of a church not far from Boston, says Harper's Magazine, approached her pastor with the complaint that she was greatly disturbed by the unmelodious singing of one of her neighbors. "It's positively unbearable," she said. "That man in the pew in front of us spoils the service for me. His voice is harsh and he has no idea of tune. Can't you ask him to change his pew?" The good pastor was sorely perplexed. After a moment's reflection, he said, "Well, I naturally would feel a little delicacy on that score, especially as I should have to tell him why I asked it. But I'll tell you what I might do." Here his face became illuminated by a happy thought. "I might ask him to join the choir."

There was less enmity on the part of the Jews against the Persians than against the other great nations with whom they came in contact, due probably to the monotheism which characterized the Persian religion. NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The New York Evening Sun financial review Saturday said:

Opening prices in the greater number of prominent issues were at small losses compared with Friday's closing on a volume of business that showed moderate activity in most stocks.

Changes in the first part of the session as a rule were continued within narrow limits, and after the first dip prices in a large number of the leading shares developed a firmer tendency under the influence of covering of shorts.

Sentiment in Wall street circles was not particularly depressed in consequence of the uncertain railroad labor situation and in rail stocks only minor reactions from the final figures of the preceding day were recorded.

M. & St. P. road for San Antonio, Texas, in charge of Lieut. O. O. Treadwell, Troop 3, First cavalry, and Captain E. J. Driver, quartermaster corps. The recruits are traveling in a special train composed of three tourist sleepers and a baggage and kitchen car. It is expected the next detachment will be ready to be moved in about fifteen days.

WEATHERMAN SAYS SHOWERS WILL BRING SPELL OF COOLNESS

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Relief from the terrific heat wave which has baked the plains states for the past week was due Monday, according to the weather bureau officials here, who said showers and cool breezes would arrive before night. From then on, it predicted, it will get cooler.

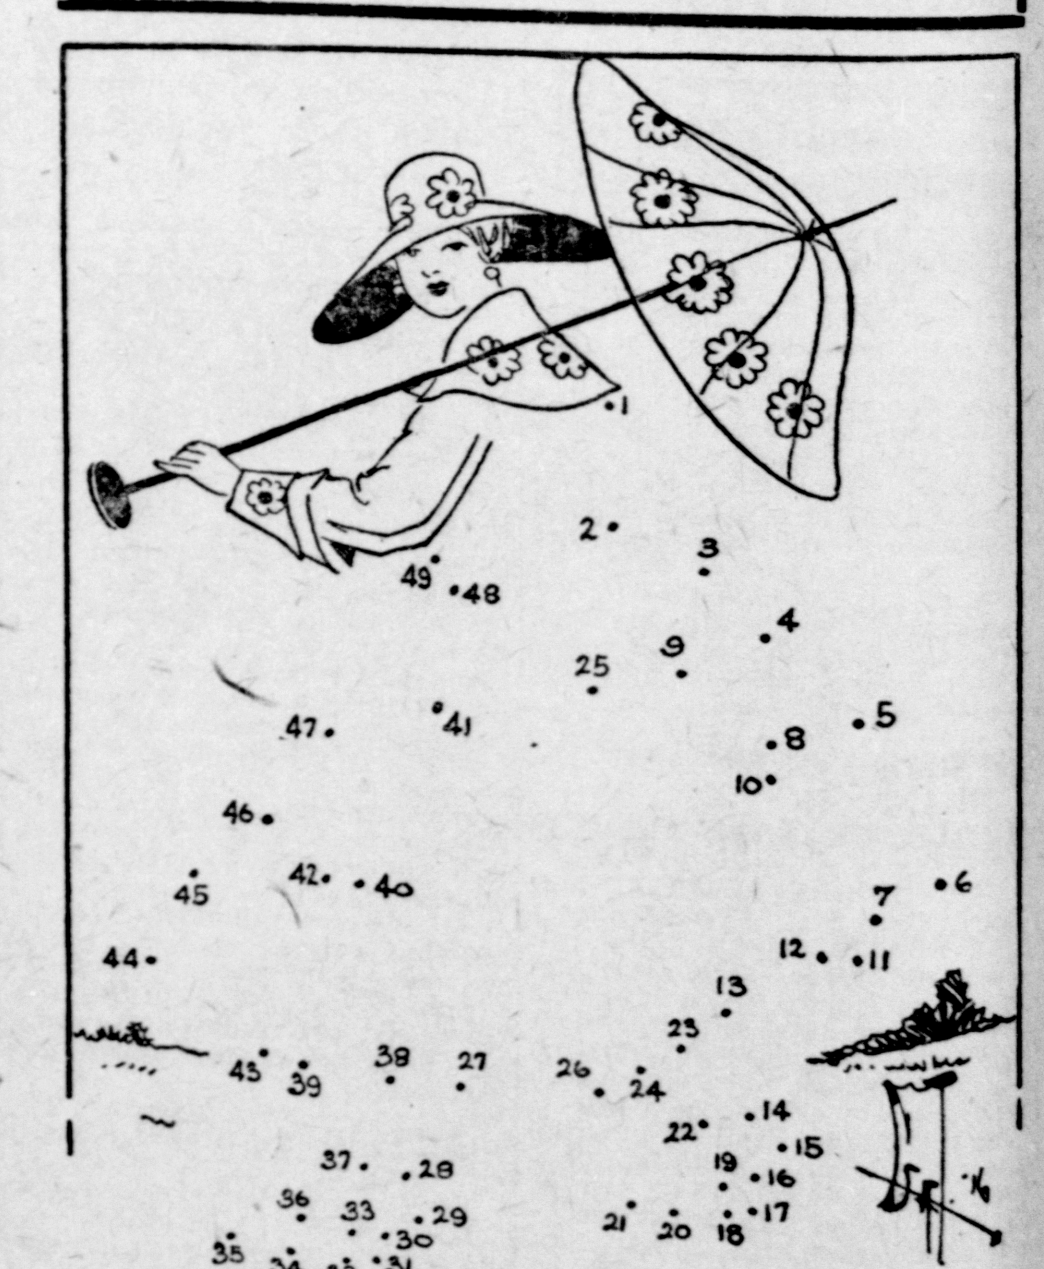

More than a score of deaths were reported Monday as a result of the heat of the last two days. Of these three deaths were reported from Milwaukee, two in Kenosha, one each in Oconomowoc, Wausau, Fond du Lac, Madison and La Crosse. Four died in Chicago. Nine drowned here Sunday.

The high temperature in Chicago yesterday was 91. Kansas City and St. Louis recorded the highest temperature with 96. At El Paso and San Antonio the mercury registered 88 and 92 respectively.

Health officials blame the heat for continued infantile paralysis gains. A twenty year old girl and two babies suffering from the plague died within the last 24 hours, making a total of eighteen deaths since January, as against five in the same period last year. There were 74 cases of the disease at the county hospital Monday. Two new cases were reported during the night.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

POOR CONVENTIONS NOT TO BE SOUGHT

Only Gatherings That Can Afford to Come Here Are in Demand with Convention Bureau of Chamber

Only such conventions as can afford to hold their meetings here will be sought by the new Chamber of Commerce Publicity and Convention bureau, according to rules adopted at a meeting of the bureau Monday morning. The bureau outlined a complete policy in relation to conventions, which was made public as follows:

"The Convention and Publicity bureau will act as a medium of service always at the command of organizations holding their conventions in La Crosse; it will co-operate in seeking to obtain accommodations, entertainment, and all other facilities at a minimum cost; it will aid organizations to secure publicity in connection with conventions held in La Crosse; when possible it will provide a meeting place for conventions held in La Crosse.

"Bearing in mind that conventions are business meetings to be held where best suited for their work, the Convention and Publicity bureau will discriminate in the selection and solicitation of conventions, endeavoring to bring to La Crosse only such conventions as can afford to hold their meetings here and which it is believed La Crosse can accommodate with comfort to the delegates.

"Proposed invitations on the part of local organizations, individuals, or firms to have conventions meet in La Crosse should first be presented to the Convention and Publicity bureau; otherwise, requests for the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse to efforts to solicit funds for the entertainment of such convention or conventions will be given no consideration by the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse."

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

GERMANS FAIL IN DESPERATE EFFORT TO TAKE FLEURY

Village Three and a Half Miles Northeast of Verdun Is the Scene of Bitter Fighting

FRENCH GAIN ON SOMME

Fortified Wood Between Guillemont and Maurepas Taken; Maurepas Almost Wholly in French Hands

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The Germans made a second desperate attempt to recapture the village of Fleury, three and one-half miles northeast of Verdun Monday night, attacking in force after spraying the French positions with liquid fire. The war office announced Monday that French barrage infantry fire stopped the attack short, inflicting serious losses on the enemy.

In Sunday's fighting north of the Somme, the French captured a strongly fortified wood between Guillemont and Maurepas. Six German cannons were captured. Last night an active artillery duel continued on the Somme front, but there were no infantry engagements of importance.

Practically the whole of the village of Maurepas is now in French hands as the result of Thursday's fighting and local actions since that time. The French first captured a number of strong positions at the outskirts of the town and then drove the Germans from the remainder of the village with their artillery. German artillery made it inadvisable for the French to occupy the remainder of Maurepas until the French lines were advanced further north of the village.

British Patrols Withdrawn
LONDON, Aug. 21.—British covering patrols withdrew before strong enemy forces east of Fourceaux wood in Sunday night's fighting, but the Germans were unable to follow up the advance because of British artillery fire. General Haig reported this afternoon.

The Germans three times attacked British positions at Fourceaux wood, after heavy bombardment but were each time repulsed.

The Germans bombarded British positions near Pozières and northeast of Contalmaison with gas shells Sunday night.

In the northern fighting zone the Germans attempted a raid on British trenches northeast of Hulluch and east of Leptentin. They were driven back, penetrating the British positions at only one point, from which they were immediately ejected.

Desultory Attacks
BERLIN, Aug. 21.—German troops reported desultory British attacks west of Fourceaux wood and French grenade attacks near Maurepas, it was officially announced Monday.

BRISTOW REPLIES TO STATE LEADER DEFENDING "BOB"

Upholds His Criticism of G. O. P. Platform and Says Services Are Too Valuable to Lose

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 21.—"So far as supporting Senator La Follette is concerned, I cheerfully do so because I do not want the nation to lose the value of his services."

This sentence is taken from a telegram addressed to Cameron W. Frazier, secretary of the republican state central committee written by former United States Senator Joseph L. Bristow asking him if it were true that he was coming into Wisconsin to defend Senator La Follette's vote on the Wilson Underwood tariff bill.

"As to Senator La Follette's vote on the tariff bill, I beg to say that he considered it a question of sustaining the old Aldrich law or voting for the Underwood bill," Senator Bristow wired Mr. Frazier. "It was a hard question to decide. Both were bad. He finally decided to vote for the Underwood bill as the lesser of the two evils. I decided the other way and voted against it. However, I have no criticism to make of Senator La Follette's vote. A study of the amendments which he offered to the bill clearly demonstrates that he is a sound protectionist and worthy of the support of any republican."

"As to his criticism of the present republican national platform, in my opinion he did right. Some features of that platform are indefensible. If you expect approval of that platform to be a test of republicanism, we might as well close up the headquarters. I am glad we have a candidate who is bigger than the platform and has a record that demonstrates that. So far as supporting Senator La Follette is concerned, I cheerfully do so because I do not want the nation to lose the value of his services. His record of eleven years in the senate has been of great achievement for the people of the nation and I sincerely trust Wisconsin will by an overwhelming majority return him for another term."

Rail Negotiations

pends whether the entire country become prostrated before what it is believed would be the greatest struggle between capital and labor in history. Various cities have estimated they would face food and fuel shortages within a week after a general transportation tie up.

Would Do Great Damage
"Any computation of figures, however conservative, would be so enormous that the average citizen could not comprehend it," said G. C. White, acting chief of the office of markets of the department.

A strike within the next few weeks, even if it lasted less than a week, according to White, would work almost immeasurable havoc to the peach and apple growers of the northwest.

"Hundreds of cities would be reduced to a bread and meat diet. And this diet could not last long in some localities."

White declared industrial plants in every section of the country would be forced to close down through absence of raw materials. Millions of workers in such plants would be forced out of work. With salaries thus cut off, they would be unable to purchase necessities of life even were they to be had.

The threatened railroad strike is menacing wheat men who have thousands of bushels at railroad stations in the northwest states, gambling on their chances of getting their crops to market.

Meeting briefly Monday forenoon, the employees received approving telegrams from labor bodies and individuals and adjourned until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Big railroad men of the west, with the single demand of "arbitration" on single demand of "arbitration" on their lips, found President Wilson's answer awaiting them. It is that acceptance of the eight-hour day now, and appointment of a commission to investigate all the arbitration points involved in the threatened railway strike, is the surest means toward bringing about a permanent, workable arbitration for the future.

Arrival of the western railroad presidents and receipts of hundreds of telegrams from commercial and industrial concerns all over the country were the features of the first day of the second week of the president's intervention between the warring railroads and railroad brotherhoods. The presidents came at President Wilson's invitation and the telegrams—in part at least, at the invitation of the railroads.

Other presidents arriving during the morning were E. P. Ripley, Santa Fe, Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, now receiver for the Rock Island; Ralph Peters, Long Island; C. R. Grey, Western Maryland and L. E. Johnson, Norfolk & Western.

Business Appeals
Railroad executives here made no secret of the fact that they were lining up all possible business support for their arbitration contention. The president made his reply known to one of these telegrams, that to George Pope, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. Pope declared 35,000 manufacturing organizations, employing 3,000,000 persons, are utterly dependent on uninterrupted railroad service. He urged the stoppage of railroad service and at the same time to maintain the principle of arbitration.

Apparently for Eight-Hour Day

Existing means have failed, the president replied, and declared he is moving to strengthen the principles of arbitration so that such a situation cannot arise again. Regarding the eight-hour day, he said in his telegram to Pope:—"The whole economic movement of the time seems to point to it."

MAN'S BEST FRIEND WELL CARED FOR BY FORCES IN CONFLICT

Horse, wounded by shrapnel, being made ready for operation.

Each country at the front in the European battlefields has its own well-equipped veterinary hospital, and in these "Dobbin" is carefully nursed back to health. At the outset of the war the average age of a horse was six weeks, but now, with added knowledge of the treatment of horses' diseases, and with more attention paid to them, the horse is able to get a longer lease of life—six months. The difference speaks volumes for the work of the organizations which have taken over the care of the horse in the war.

The opinion in Washington is that demands on the president by the railroad heads for arbitration of the eight-hour day question, therefore will not move him.

The conflict would seem to be irreconcilable, but the feeling in Washington is unmistakable that some manner the strike will be avoided.

Representatives of the brotherhoods say it has become a struggle between President Wilson and the railroads for the time being, and they are waiting to see how it comes out before they again take a hand.

The men apparently are satisfied to have won the president's support of the eight hour day. On other points they may be expected to yield should a deadlock be reached on the present negotiations and further efforts be necessary.

While there is nothing on the surface to indicate the managers or executives will do other than stand pat for arbitration, there are deep-seated rumblings around their headquarters that their councils are divided on the point and that some counter propositions may be forthcoming.

Demanding arbitration as a basis of settling the dispute with the brotherhoods, Hale Holden, president of the Burlington line Saturday afternoon issued a statement outlining the position of thirty-three railroad executives who called on President Wilson.

"The representatives of the railroads here present have given careful consideration to the proposals submitted by you (President Wilson) for an adjustment of the critical situation confronting us," the statement began. The statement told of the "grave sense of responsibility" the executives felt in protecting the interests of the railroads. It is essentially the common right of every citizen "to have his day in court; it is indeed a just demand for the railroads," the statement said in emphasizing the necessity for arbitration. The eight hour day when considered in connection with railroad train service is a question of honest difference, the statement says. The fact that railroads must operate at all hours renders it impossible to restrict the use of labor to a fixed standard, it said.

The feature of the trip was the splendid music furnished throughout the day by the Municipal band. The boat was a little late in leaving the local harbor and consequently but 15 minutes were spent at Lansing. The "Sidney" returned to La Crosse about midnight.

UNDERWOOD ONE WHO ROSE FROM THE CAB TO ROAD PRESIDENCY

(By CARL D. GROAT)

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Former "bunkies" of railroad camps, fellow workers on engines, and side partners on freight trains were meeting here Monday. But some of them arrived in their private cars, hurry back and forth to meetings in taxicabs, while the others came as ordinary passengers and trudged over the hot pavements afoot.

They are the presidents of the big railroads of the United States and some of the 640 representatives of the 400,000 trainmen in the four brotherhoods now threatening the country with a strike.

Many of the presidents started railroading as members of section gangs, brakemen or firemen. Working beside them were some of the men whose demands for an eight-hour day they are bitterly contesting.

There is Fred Underwood—Fred D. of the Erie, to be exact. A brotherhood man, who would not allow his name to be known beyond the fact that he is called John, said a better fellow never lived than Fred. They used to work on the same engine on the Erie.

"Yep, Fred's all right, but we've got to have that eight-hour day," said John.

Take the case of Bill Lannin, one of the brotherhood representatives and A. H. Smith, New York Central president. "Bill" and "A. H." started railroading together a long time ago as members of the same bridge gang. Smith moved along pretty rapidly, becoming division superintendent of the Lake Shore, general superintendent of the Big Four, and general manager and vice president of the New York Central and finally president.

Bill is still in the ranks, but is a division chairman of the brotherhood. "He's a fine fellow," said each of the other today.

There are others who knew Daniel Willard when he was an engineer and so on through the list of railroad presidents. A surprisingly large proportion of them started at the bottom.

The situation has its other odd side, which is that many of the brotherhood men are fairly well to do, comfortably fixed beyond the fact of owning their own homes.

President Stone of the engineers is a college graduate. Each of the brotherhood presidents, according to their fellows, get at least $10,000 a year salary.

"Perhaps that helps explain the sort of action we get out of our presidents," said a brotherhood man. "They are $10,000 men and we think they earn it."

Brown told the police that he pulled out his knife and struck at a man who had hit several blows with his fist. He said he did not know whether his knife had gone home.

HUGHES MAY MEET JOHNSON IN EFFORT TO BRING HARMONY

BY PERRY ARNOLD

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 21.—A meeting between Governor Johnson of California, and Republican Presidential Nominee Hughes may be arranged before the candidate leaves California in an effort to promote harmony between the republican factions in this state. This became known Monday when it was learned Governor Hughes was at Long Beach Sunday at the same time the California executive was there. Governor Johnson, however, out of respect of Governor Hughes' busy program did not inform the presidential nominee that he was there, so a meeting between the two failed.

It was said a meeting may be arranged at Sacramento while Hughes is on his way to Ogden.

Governor Hughes on Monday was to see something of the San Diego exposition, to plant a tree and to address a mass meeting here, returning to Los Angeles in time to speak before a big gathering in the evening.

BADGERS EXPECT MUCH WITH WITHINGTON IN CHARGE OF THE SQUAD

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 21.—Wisconsin's football team is expected by the Badger students to win the conference championship this season. With a big bunch of promising candidates for the team and brand-new coaches who received their training under Percy Haughton of Harvard, the Cardinals are expected to beat all opponents this year. Head Coach Withington, late of Harvard, after a conference with the athletic authorities at Wisconsin on Saturday, sent out letters to all prospective candidates for the team requesting them to come to Madison on Sept. 15 and prepare to report for practice on Sept. 20, the conference opening date.

Coach Withington will be aided by Assistant Coaches Doherty and Soucy, both of Harvard. Assistant Coach "Cub" Buck, captain of last season's Wisconsin team, is in the west and will report for work on Sept. 15. Another assistant coach, probably "Keg" Driver of Madison, a former star member of the Wisconsin team, will be employed.

Myers is Leader

Paul D. Myers of Milwaukee, captain of this season's team, will play at one of the end positions. The other wing will be contested for by Cramer, who played in some of the games last year; Schrank, another substitute of last year; Pladoes, a star on the freshman team last season, and several others.

The candidates for tackle will include such experienced players as Powell, Hancock, Rosenberger, Gray, Fitzer and others. Candidates for half backs and full back will include Kreuz, Simpson, Stark, Vaughn, Berger, Edler, Olson, Bondi and others, most of them being seasoned players. The change in the coaching staff is expected to result in a large number of candidates, probably 150 coming out for the team.

EAGLES DEFEATED IN RAGGED GAME WITH CASHTONITES

In a ragged game at League park Sunday Cashton defeated the Eagles of La Crosse 10 to 7. Errors came thick and fast on both sides and wrangling with the umpire several times delayed the game.

The Eagles were first to score, pushing one run over in the first inning. With the Cashton men four runs in the lead in the fifth, the Eagles scored twice in the sixth, the Eagles apparently had a comfortable lead but errors in the infield banished hopes and Cashton scored four runs soon afterwards.

Emil Kabat, throwing for the home boys, allowed but three hits in seven innings he pitched. He was relieved by Weigel with one out in the eighth. Bell threw the entire game for Cashton.

The score:

Cashton . . . 011120410—10
Eagles . . . 100042000—7
Batteries: Bell and Wais; Kabat, Weigel and Stellick.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Sunday's Hero

Jack Coombs, Pitching for the Dodgers, Coombs allowed only one hit and won his game 1 to 0.

The Giants fell before Bob Steels' slants at St. Louis. Although they amassed eight singles they were unable to score a run and the Cardinals won, 5 to 0.

Benny Kauff had a pretty good day, the ex-Fed getting a pair of bingles.

Roger Hornsby kept up his phenomenal batting by making two trips to the plate and hitting safely each time.

Clarence Mitchell, Red hurler, walloped the ball for three hits himself but his wildness was costly and he lost to the Braves, 4 to 3.

Rabbit Maranville hit safely four times out of five attempts.

All teams in the American league were idle.

Hughes saved the Braves when he went to the slab in the fourth inning with the bases full and only one out. He retired the side without allowing a run.

KNUDSON LACKING AND RAMBLERS ARE INDOOR CHAMPIONS

When their star pitcher, Knudson, failed to appear Sunday morning at Copeland, the Nelsons, indoor champions of Copeland park, refused to play the Ramblers of West Avenue for the city championship and the title went to the Ramblers by default.

At West Avenue, the Badgers defeated the Champs of Copeland park 17 to 5 for the junior indoor title.

The Juniors of Copeland forfeited the basket ball title to the Eagles of Hood street when they failed to appear Sunday morning.

RESTA WINNER OF GRAND PRIX

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Dario Resta, driving a Peugeot, won the Grand Prix automobile classic here Saturday afternoon, capturing the final heat of fifty miles in 2:52.49. Lewis, driving a Hoskins, was second, and Buzane, in a Deussen, third.

Resta won the first heat after,

Ralph De Palma was forced to retire for the day after going two laps, and from this time on the classic was devoid of interest, for Ralph was the only pilot the fans thought capable of forcing Resta to put on full speed to cop first honors.

Brooklyn hammered Claude Hendrix for ten hits, which were productive of only one run.

THE HASKIN LETTER

MINERALS BY MAIL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The other day a man out in Colorado found what he took to be a large-sized diamond. The varied mineral resources of his native state were pretty well known to him, and he knew that diamonds are scarce in Colorado outside of rings and scarfpins. So he sent his find carefully registered to the United States Geological Survey at Washington, where the mineralogists regretted to inform him that it wasn't a diamond but a lump of quartz.

Diamonds that aren't diamonds are among the things that come often to the Geological Survey for identification. A large number of rocks of one sort or another arrive with each day's mail. Commonest of all are specimens of "fool's gold"—iron pyrites, which is a yellow, shiny mineral that comes nearer the popular idea of what gold looks like than does gold itself.

Mica is another strong bidder for first place among the mineral that looks more valuable to the uninitiated than they are. Certain micas in the form of very small particles have a yellowish, shiny appearance that leads to their being taken for gold. Along with the quartz "diamonds" and the "fool's gold" they are one of the commonest minerals that mislead the amateur prospector.

The Geological Survey has little trouble in dealing with cases such as these, for an expert can tell at a glance what the mineral in question really is. Several people every day, however, send in specimens of one sort or another, with the modest request appended that the government furnish a complete analysis by return mail.

Now, an analysis of a sample might cost the government fifty or seventy-five dollars, and might be a very dangerous thing when made. The survey is forbidden by law to make such analysis for private individuals, and is effectually restrained from breaking the law by the lack of money appropriated for that purpose. The chemists and mineralogists are all kept busy analyzing specimens in connection with the survey work. Officials believe that were any good purpose served by making analyses of specimens sent in by all and sundry, congress might be persuaded to extend the jurisdiction and the appropriation of the survey to include such work. Such a step, however, might be far from desirable.

Your miner may or may not be an honest and deserving person to help. Men have been known to sell mines with the aid of artistically illustrated prospectuses that were something of a disappointment to the stockholders after work was begun. There are mine promoters who only need a little encouragement and they will sell you a radium prospect in the middle of the Southern Ocean.

The assay is one of the important features of a selling scheme. The assay is supposed to show how many dollars worth of gold is present in the rock in question. It is customary—not so much now as it once was—to make the assay from one, or two or three, fragments of rock. Needless to say, the mine-owner with a claim for sale does not hunt through his rock-dump for an unusually poor specimen as a sample for assay. He has been known to spend some hours going over the dump for a rich fragment—maybe the only one in sight.

Suppose that he would send such a fragment to the Geological Survey, and that the law and the appropriation provided for the analysis of all specimens sent in. The chemists of the survey would report that rock like the sample would run $100 to the ton in gold. That would be true enough, but a man might spend several years of his life looking over the hillside where the sample came from without finding another one as rich. But armed with the official assay on government stamped paper—consider what help the worthy discoverer would find that in selling a claim or promoting a $10,000,000 company.

So the Geological Survey does not make analysis of the specimens that are continually coming in. The experts do, however, give the sample their careful consideration. As they are able to recognize most of the minerals of the United States at sight, they can tell the sender whether his rock is absolutely valueless, or whether it is worth while to have a commercial assay made, and a private geologist look over the property.

Whether the opinion, or the subsequent assay, means anything or not depends on how representative the sample is. Not long ago there was much excitement over a gold strike in New England. Samples assayed ran as high as $50 to the ton in gold, which would represent a handsome profit for a company that chose to mill the rock. The Geological Survey was asked to investigate, however, and they found that the rock in actual practice would run about six-

SOME GOOD ADVICE

Strengthened by La Crosse Experiences

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. La Crosse people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from La Crosse people.

G. A. Phelps, 1402 Jackson St., La Crosse, says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble and backache that generally goes with it. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and had great relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Phelps had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

ty cents to the ton. The samples had evidently been picked with an eye to richness rather than to their representative characters.

This may happen with the most honest intentions on the part of the prospector. The typical mining variety is a born optimist. He stakes a claim, works it a while, and looks over his dump for a sample. He picks up three or four fragments, tosses them aside because he feels that they don't do his claim justice. He wants to be fair to all concerned, himself included. Maybe he even throws aside one as too rich. Finally he picks out that one that looks pretty good and has it assayed. That specimen may misrepresent his mine a thousand per cent.

The modern methods of big companies in sampling a new property furnish a strong contrast. Thirty or forty thousand dollars may be spent in preliminary work, simply to find out whether the property is worth working. Since in cases like the Michigan copper mines, the investment in plant may run up to a million dollars, it is worth while to be sure you are right before going ahead. One company in doing its preliminary work recently took out fifty samples. Each sample weighed two tons—a total of 200,000; and the 200,000 pounds was a fair sample of the property.

Of course, this is working on an exceptionally large scale; but the rule holds true that a stray specimen does not mean much, unless it has been taken by an expert so that it is a sample and not a specimen. None the less, the survey likes to get the mass of specimens that are sent in by the public. They furnish a check on what is being turned up in the way of mineral all over the country; and now and again something comes in that is of unusual interest.

Such a specimen will probably come from a man who knows a good deal about minerals in a rough and ready way, and has been puzzled by finding an unusual rock. He has enough instinct for minerals to know that his discovery is something out of the ordinary, so he sends it in for identification.

Up in a certain Alaskan placer gold district, the miners washing gold from the gravel were bothered by the presence of a non-descript brown mineral that was exceedingly difficult to separate from the gold. Gold is separated from gravel by taking advantage of its great weight; but this strange mineral was also exceedingly heavy. It made a nuisance of itself. The miners cursed liberally, for like most practical gold-miners a few common ores were the only ones they knew. Finally some of them remembered that one of the Geological Survey experts was in the neighborhood, and they took the heavy brown mineral to him. It was a valuable ore of tin. And for four years now Alaska has been producing tin at a good profit.

So among the diamonds that aren't diamonds and the gold that isn't gold almost any day someone may send in some strange mineral to Washington that is really worth while.

To go to law is the art of cutting one's throat with a pen.

TRAPSHOOTERS' ANNUAL GRAND AMERICAN HANDICAP BEGINS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—Thousands of expert trapshooters all ready to shoot and 25,000 thousand men and women sportsmen from all over the country ready to watch them do it, marked the opening here Monday of the premier annual event in the trapshooting world, the Grand American Handicap.

The afternoon's program was mostly for St. Louis sharpshooters. Tuesday the national amateur championships were to be held at both the single and double targets. Wednesday the preliminary handicap will be contested.

The Grand American Handicap, the classic of the meet, will be shot on Thursday; and the consolation prize on Friday. Every day will be ladies' day. Fifty-bird events have been arranged for them.

Origin of "Furlong." Furlong was at first a furrow long, or the distance that a pair of oxen would plow in half an hour.

HILLSBORO YOUTH TO PHILIPPINES

HILLSBORO, Wis.—(Special).—A letter from Byron Ewing states that he left on July 24th for the Philippines. Several months ago

Ewing left Hillsboro and joined the regulars at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. Later the troops departed for California, their boat sailing for Manila on August 5th.

School Soon to Start
The fall term of the Hillsboro schools begins on September 4th. The usual preparations are being made and a large attendance is expected at the opening date. The Hillsboro schools rank with the best in the country, the high school being equal to those in much larger towns as to equipment as well as curriculum.

Several changes have been made in the faculty and among the grade teachers. The following is a list of the instructors for the ensuing year:

High school: Principal, C. M. Ewers; Mathematics, Ann E. Edwards; English, Isabelle Bodden; German, Amanda I. Ross.

Grades: Seventh and Eighth, Margaret Newman; Sixth, May Breary; Fifth, Blanche McCauley; Fourth, Kathryn Gleiss; Third, Josie Cook; Second, Mildred Linke; First, Matilda Schuman; Kindergarten, Alesia Wernick.

Hillsboro Wins
In a one-sided game of ball Hillsboro defeated Rockbridge on Sunday by a score of 10 to 1. A game is scheduled with Kendall for next Sunday. The locals are playing fast ball and are open for engagements with any good team in this section of the country. J. A. Hickok is the business manager.

Local and Personal
Edw. Wolf and family returned home last Saturday after spending a month camping in northern Minnesota. The trip was made in their automobile.

Frank Picha and Charles Staley drove new cars from Milwaukee last week.

Mrs. E. B. Harkin is here from Aberdeen, South Dakota, to visit among friends and relatives.

Charles White, who teaches school in Taylor, Wis., is home for a short vacation after attending summer school at the state university.

Frank Moore has been disabled for several days, having been severely cut in his arm while removing glass from a door.

The manager of the brewery has issued an order to the effect that no beer will be sold on Sunday hereafter. The lid is now on as the saloons have been closed at the rear on Sundays for several months.

"Wonderous is the strength of cheerfulness and its power of endurance. The cheerful man will do more in the same time, will do it better, will persevere longer, than the sad or sullen."—Carlyle.
